

Reading Chair by Finn Juhl

Reading Chair

In 1953 the architect Finn Juhl designed a small elegant dining chair for the company Bovirke.

The Reading Chair is made in oak with back and frame in either teak or walnut. The seat is upholstered with fabric or leather. Furthermore a black stained version of the chair is also available.

The chair is called "Reading Chair" because of the horizontal frame, ending the back. The Reading Chair is very comfortable and allows many seating possibilities which is typical for the Finn Juhl's furniture. You can even sit backwards on the chair resting the arms on the frame.
